NBI Ultra Short-Term Fixed Income Fund

Investor Series
Category: Canadian Corporate Fixed Income

Investment Objective

To generate interest income while minimizing the effects of interest-rate fluctuations. The fund invests in a portfolio composed mainly of fixed-rate Canadian bonds (either corporate, governmental or municipal) and/or preferred shares issued by North-American companies and enters into derivatives transactions to generate a floating rate of income. Floating-rate income can therefore be obtained by swapping, through the use of derivatives, the rate of a fixed-income security for the short-term floating rate in effect at the time of the swap less the fees payable to the counterparty in relation to the derivative transactions. The short-term floating rate used will correspond, depending on the securities covered, to the 3-month Canadian Dealer Offered Rate (CDOR) or the 3-month London Interbank Offered Rate (LIBOR). The derivatives will be entered into with counterparties having a designated rating. It is expected that investments in foreign securities will not exceed approximately 40% of the Fund's net assets.
